

ABSTRACT

A process, method, and system that examines a set of services to identify two or more parallel services performed by a common processor. A defined number of data elements are processed to simulate a data flow through the set of services. 5 An element ratio is determined that defines the portion of data elements processed by each of the parallel services.

20686324.doc